Many athletes overcome great odds to complete an ironman. Adrian Anderson was an elite ironman triathlete accustomed to overcoming the odds. This past Sunday the odds were stacked against him. The Vancouver police have deemed Adrian’s death suspicious and are continuing their investigation with informal interviews of those closest to Adrian. The initial coroners report was inconclusive stating that the toxicology tests have not been completed but that Adrian suffered a cardiovascular fatality. Buzz within the triathlete world points to the hostility between Adrian and his ex-trainer/girlfriend Ivy Jones that was often displayed on twitter. The on-scene paramedics reported that they had been keeping an eye on Adrian for 10 km prior to his collapse. “Not only had he been not running straight, which is common at an ironman, but he was cheering for himself, like he had crossed the finish line” says head paramedic, Donald Northland. Adrian’s body also appeared to have been disrespected – “with someone’s spit on his forehead”, Ron Johnston, paramedic. Adrian’s sister has talked. . . continued p.6

Change is coming to Main St.
whether you want it or not

The Mount Pleasant neighbourhood is going to have a face lift. The mayor endorses re-zoning proposed by the locally renowned developer, Omid Manucherri. Many citizens have begun protesting. “Too much too soon” – says local resident Marco Lin. The residents are also upset about the way in which everything was handled, citing Omid’s own twitter comments as degrading to the local community. The Lee building which stands central to what remains of the old main street is now slated for demolish in a months time, the owners and the city having reached an agreement with Omid. The city got their say on this one, as the recently deceased Adrian Anderson who was a ¼ owner of the Lee building died without a will, therefore forcing the government to step in and dispose of his assets to equally divide them amongst his siblings. Kevin Xu of Xu camera’s in the Lee building “says business is slow these days...time to move on with life. Finally looks like I’ll be able to catch a break”. Once again it appears this cities residents, developers, and small businesses are at odds.

YesYoga hosts a memorial yoga-thon in memory of Adrian Anderson. Friday October 2, 2015 from 6am-midnight.
